Attorney David Karp and Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist Gilbert King, author of Devil in the Grove: Thurgood Marshall, the Groveland Boys, and the Dawn of a New America, discuss the importance of access to historically significant grand jury records in the quest for truth and reconciliation in our criminal justice system. David wrote an amicus brief for King and the First Amendment Foundation on the subject in a case before the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit involving grand jury records about a 1946 unsolved lynching of two African American couples in Georgia.
