

Published on The National Law Review <https://natlawreview.com>

---

Dirty Steel-Toe Boots, Episode 10: Corporate Counsel's Role Managing OSHA Compliance

Article By:

Phillip B. Russell

---

In this episode of Dirty Steel-Toe Boots, host Phillip Russell has an enlightening conversation with Lori Baggett an in-house corporate counsel with responsibility for legal issues related to workplace safety and health and Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA). Lori discusses how her experience as a former outside counsel helps her add value to her role as vice president and assistant general counsel. She offers practical tips for in-house counsel who are responsible for OSHA matters, including for those who have limited experience in this area. Lori also shares some tips for in-house safety professionals on how to best work with their legal departments to improve safety and manage liability. Phillip and Lori have a candid and insightful discussion about diversity, equity, and inclusion in the legal profession.

© 2025, Ogletree, Deakins, Nash, Smoak & Stewart, P.C., All Rights Reserved.

---

National Law Review, Volume XII, Number 245

Source URL: <https://natlawreview.com/article/dirty-steel-toe-boots-episode-10-corporate-counsel-s-role-managing-osh-compliance>