

Published on The National Law Review <https://natlawreview.com>

Are Directors Employees?

Article By:

Keith Paul Bishop

Yesterday's post concerned a case in which a California Court of Appeal held that an arbitrator must decide whether a former partner is an employee. This reminded me of this six year old post.

I was also reminded of a question that I have posed in several prior posts: Is a director an employee? Of course, some directors are also employees of the corporation. The question, however, is whether a director qua director is an employee. Here are some my earlier posts on the subject:

- Is A Corporate Director An Employee Subject To Workers' Compensation?
- Has California Made Directors Employees?
- Do Directors Avoid Employee Status Under AB 5?
- Is A Director An Employee? The SEC Has Some Contradictory Answers.

© 2010-2024 Allen Matkins Leck Gamble Mallory & Natsis LLP

National Law Review, Volumess XII, Number 315

Source URL: <https://natlawreview.com/article/are-directors-employees>