Private equity was on fire globally, at least until 2023. Fundraising targets got ever larger and deal activity was on a roll. So, what changed and what can both investors and managers expect for 2024? In this episode of Private Market Talks, we speak with Fraser van Rensburg, Co-Founder and Managing Partner of Asante Capital. Fraser explains the current fundraising environment and dives into the impact of higher for longer interest rates, the denominator effect and other factors on private equity fundraising. He also explains the rise of continuation funds and the attraction of private credit funds. We cover a lot of ground. Enjoy the conversation!
