

Published on The National Law Review <https://natlawreview.com>

China | Tourist L-Visa Application Documents Simplified

Article By:

BAL Global Practice Group

Chinese officials announced that its embassies and consulates in the United States will simplify document requirements for U.S. nationals applying for a tourist L-visa.

Key Points:

- U.S. visa applicants will no longer be required to submit proof of certain travel details, including a round-trip air ticket, hotel reservation, itinerary or invitation letter.
- Visa applications are processed on a case-by-case basis, so individuals should still refer to Chinese embassies and consulates to confirm specific application requirements.

BAL Analysis: As previously reported, Chinese authorities recently implemented a temporary reduction of visa fees, lowering the fee from $185 to $140 for certain entry visas. The Chinese government has introduced various measures recently to increase inbound travel from foreign tourists and drive business in its economic recovery from the COVID-19 pandemic.

©2025 Berry Appleman & Leiden. All Rights Reserved.

National Law Review, Volume XIV, Number 16

Source URL: <https://natlawreview.com/article/china-tourist-l-visa-application-documents-simplified>