

Gary Chodes Joins The National Law Review as CEO

Article By:

The National Law Review

The National Law Review, a leading online legal and business news and information source with a history dating back over 100 years, recently announced the appointment of Gary Chodes as its new CEO on July 1, 2024. Mr. Chodes is a serial entrepreneur from the legal-tech, legal services, and fin-tech sectors.

Mr. Chodes' appointment follows the recently announced acquisition of The National Law Review by DailyDAC, LLC, a publisher of financial, investment, and legal news, analysis, commentary, and continuing education.

"The millions of loyal readers of The National Law Review will now have access to additional proprietary content. These new resources come in several forms, including informative newsletters and searchable databases. We are excited to leverage our collective expertise to provide readers with comprehensive coverage and analysis of legal and regulatory trends," said Mr. Chodes.

The National Law Review is one of the largest legal news sources in the world and one of the few not behind a paywall. According to Mr. Chodes: "The National Law Review's millions of daily readers — including accountants, attorneys, business owners, C-level executives, consultants, entrepreneurs, financial advisors, investment bankers, investment professionals, and private fund managers — view The National Law Review as a 'must read' for staying up to date with a rapidly changing legal and regulatory environment."
