

Published on The National Law Review <https://natlawreview.com>

Workplace Safety Review: Navigating Change: OSHA's 2024 Wrap-Up and a Look Ahead to 2025 [Podcast]

Article By:

Adam Roseman

Joshua Bernstein

In the latest episode of Greenberg Traurig's Workplace Safety Review podcast, co-hosts Adam Roseman and Joshua Bernstein provide a comprehensive wrap-up of the significant OSHA developments from 2024 and explore what's on the horizon for 2025. They delve into the impacts of administrative changes, including the Supreme Court's Loper Bright decision, which overturned Chevron deference, and how it may affect OSHA litigation. Their discussion highlights key regulatory updates, like the proposed heat stress and lockout/tagout standards, and examines the potential implications of the Kenrick Steel case challenging the constitutionality of the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission. As the Trump administration prepares to take office, the hosts consider the prospective leadership and policy direction under Secretary of Labor nominee Lori Chavez-DeRemer and the next OSHA head. Workplace Safety Review is a podcast where the hosts interview influential environmental, health, and safety professionals across the country regarding timely and important topics in the environmental, health, and safety world.

©2025 Greenberg Traurig, LLP. All rights reserved.

National Law Review, Volume XV, Number 13

Source URL: <https://natlawreview.com/article/navigating-change-oshas-2024-wrap-and-look-ahead-2025-podcast>