

Published on The National Law Review <https://natlawreview.com>

Diagnosing Health Care: Executive Actions Impact Federally Funded Research: What Institutions Should Do Now [Podcast]

Article By:

Emily Chi Fogler

Marylana Saadeh Helou

From removing diversity, equity, and inclusion initiatives to suspending foreign aid and canceling federal funding, it is clear that the current administration is drastically changing the landscape of government-funded research as we know it.

What should research institutions be doing now to best prepare themselves for what's to come?

On this episode, Epstein Becker Green attorneys Marylana Saadeh Helou, Emily Chi Fogler, and Elizabeth McEvoy discuss how recent executive actions are impacting federally funded research at ambulatory medical centers, hospitals, universities, and other institutions, as well as how these actions may impact existing or future grants from the government.

©2025 Epstein Becker & Green, P.C. All rights reserved.

National Law Review, Volume XV, Number 100

Source URL: <https://natlawreview.com/article/diagnosing-health-care-executive-actions-impact-federally-funded-research-what>